Fun House

© Kim Rene Kiefer

Sometimes, life is like a fun house at the circus. You look in the mirror and see a distorted reflection of yourself. In that moment, your sense of self-perception is a bit warped. At times, you may allow your perception to be skewed by others and their opinions. You look at the world through your own unique set of lenses. One of my mentors wisely said, “You see the world as you are, not as the world is.”

Cricket

Although nocturnal, cricket bridges both light and dark. Ted Andrews tells us, “The appearance of cricket heralds an awakening of sensitivities and the finding of light within the dark.” Cricket is your reminder to trust your intuition. Your gut instincts are always right, even when you feel like you are in the dark. When in doubt, go with your gut.

Just own the night like the 4th of July”

Free Up Your Light

Fourth of July sparks memories of parades, picnics, carnivals, bingo, and fireworks. Something magical occurred when you watched the sky for those lights. They gave light to the shadows of the night, showering sparks and sending swirls of smoke everywhere.

Without shadow, there cannot be light. In the beginning, God said let there be light, and that light came out of the darkness. That’s what came first — the void, utter and complete stillness, absolute nothingness. You see, you cannot have one without the other. It’s another duality.

Perhaps your shadow has a purpose. Maybe it’s the best part of yourself hidden away. Without acknowledgement, it rears its head in order to get your attention. In The Power of Unconditional Love, Ken Keyes points out that behind every negative behavior is a positive intention.

Befriend your shadow. Learn what it has to teach you. Leverage its gifts. Love that part of yourself. Embrace it rather than fight it. Let the light shine through it. In doing so, you will free up even more of your light. And, your best friend will be at your side, instead of at your back.
