

Soulestial Musings™

~ September 2012 ~

Authenticity

Authenticity. Being real. Staying true to yourself. These are all components of healthy self-expression. You long to be yourself, as others long to be themselves. Sometimes your human nature gets the best of you. Instead of speaking your truth, you settle for what is comfortable and easy. Later, you may find yourself filled with resentment and anger. That's okay. Recognize it and clean things up. Communicate your truth, set boundaries, and be yourself.

Wasp

Wasps are very diligent and persistent. They never give up when building a new home for their young. In fact, if their nest gets knocked down, then they will build a new one. That may happen several times. The message in this? Do not give up on your dreams. Hold your dreams close to your heart. They will manifest. Have faith. Keep dreaming.

Quote

“Similarly, there is no one a wildish woman loves better than a mate who can be her equal.”

~ From Women Who Run With the Wolves, by Clarissa Pinkola Estés

Mining Hidden Gold

Each of you has a least one gift you keep hidden, whether you know it or not. It's time to mine that hidden gold, to take the pearl from its lustrous shell. Your treasure cannot be hidden for long, not even from yourself.

Sometimes, you hide your gifts out of fear. That inner grouch has got your ear, telling you things that simply are not true. Yet, you believe that you're not good enough, not talented enough. You question your own abilities and worry about what others will think. It's high time to stop questioning, doubting, and worrying.

Set your fears aside and reach deep inside. Never limit your self-expression. Be real and authentic from the core of your being and your true essence. The biggest gift you can give to yourself and others is to be yourself.

As Suze Orman says, “Stand in the truth and power of your own worth.” Get that gold out, shine it up, and show the world your brilliance. You are talented, and you are magnificent. You are simply and uniquely Y-O-U!
